

Steve Harris began his Emmy award-winning career directing documentaries and music videos whilst as a film student at Howard University. He worked as development executive at TLC and A&E before co-founding and running Marlon Wayans unscripted production company, Workaholics Entertainment. Steve co-executive produced numerous projects since 2012 including the HBO comedy special, "God Loves Me", the Netflix comedy special "Woke-ish," the NBC series "I Can Do That", the 2015 Slam Dance Jury award-winning documentary "Sweet Micky For President" and co-created the comedy competition show "Funniest Wins". Steve created The Sneakertopia Museum which launched in Los Angeles in 2019 and is currently touring Asia.

